How to Choose a Mattress?

01 SIZE: The size of mattresses is a really important factor that you should take into consideration. If the mattress you are going to buy isn't the right size you will never be able to feel comfortable. Choose the size wisely as per your need when you are buying one.

02 THICKNESS: The thickness of the mattress is an essential feature. Most of the mattresses are at least 8 inches thick. However, you have mattresses that are in the range of 4-12 inches. Your body weight is a crucial factor that determines the depth of your mattress. If you are a heavy individual, you would naturally feel comfortable on thicker beds. On the other hand, lighter individuals prefer thinner beds.

03 FIRMNESS: The firmness of the mattress depends on two principal factors – the weight of the person, and the sleeping position. If you weigh <60 kg, go for a softer mattress. Whereas if you are >60 kg, you need a firmer mattress. The conforming ability of any mattress is based on the firmness of the mattress.

04 DURABILITY: The average durability of an Indian mattress is about 7 years. If you are using it for a long time and have children at home, you should not expect it to last long. If you are using Pocket Spring or Rebonded mattresses, they last around 5-7 years. For High-End Memory Spring Mattress, the lifespan is between 10-15 years, but Latex mattresses are the most durable among all and can last for about 15 years. The ideal frequency for replacing a mattress is around 7 years.

05 SUPPORT: Mattress support is the bed's ability to provide an even surface to align the spine and the pelvis. It should not sink beneath the heavier parts of the body. In the initial stages, all mattresses provide optimum support to the body's shape.

06 CONFORMING ABILITY: The mattress should conform to the sleeper's body to help align the spine. It also prevents the pressure points from developing. Usually, the topmost layers of the mattress define the conforming ability. Hence, the models that come with thicker comfort layers, like the memory foam or the latex mattress, are the ones that show the maximum conforming ability.

07 MOTION ISOLATION FACTOR: When you move around or shift during sleep, it creates a motion transfer that the other person can feel. It can be disturbing for a couple if one of them keeps shifting continuously or gets down from the bed frequently. The bonded, foam, or latex mattresses are ideal for motion isolation.

08 EDGE SUPPORT: Most mattresses sink at the edges because people tend to sit at the sides when they get into or out of bed. Some of the latest mattresses, such as the all-foam or all-latex models, do not provide the necessary support at the edges. Hence, they tend to sag on the edges after continuous usage. The mattresses and the support cores reinforced in high-density foam mattresses are the best when it comes to providing support on the edges. It is advisable to have additional padding at all the edges to neutralize the sinking of the mattresses.

09 TEMPERATURE NEUTRALITY: Naturally, people love to sleep hot. However, some mattresses absorb body heat and trap them. Such mattresses can cause discomfort as they heat more. The foam and latex mattresses are the warmest of all as they have solid support cores. However, the hybrid mattresses and the pocket spring ones are the most temperature-neutral of all, as they allow air circulation inside the mattresses.

10 ODOR CONTROL: It is natural for all mattresses to emit harmless gasses when they are new. Sometimes, these gases carry an unpleasant odor. Usually, they dissipate in few days. It is better to keep the new mattress in a ventilated room for some days before using it.

11 WEIGHT: Some mattresses are too heavy and impossible to move alone. You may need 3-4 people to even reverse the mattress from one side to the other. If you are looking for lighter mattresses then you can go for foam or spring mattresses. They are comparatively lighter than latex or hybrids.

12 NOISE PROBLEM: You will never be satisfied if your mattress makes noise. Bonnel Spring mattresses make maximum noise as they have adjustable air chambers and electrical components. You won't find any noise in foam and latex ones. As for the innerspring and the hybrids, they can also create noise or a creaking sound from their steel coils.

COMMON FALLACY ABOUT MATTRESS

THE FIRMER THE MATTRESS, THE BETTER IT IS – Conventionally, a firmer mattress ensures better support to the back. However, it depends on a person and his/her sleeping style. It is better to have a mattress that is firm as well as soft to adjust to the contours of the body.

YOU SHOULD USE THE MATTRESS UNTIL IT SAGS – Once your mattress starts losing its elasticity and sag, replace it. A sagging mattress does not provide the necessary support. Ideally, you should change your mattress every 7 years.

A MATTRESS TOPPER WILL FIX ALL PROBLEMS AND EXTEND ITS LIFE – Many people believe that a mattress topper resolves all issues and extends its lifespan. It is not necessarily so. However, you should use a mattress topper to relieve the pressure points on firm mattresses. It can also help to add comfort levels to the mattress.

WASHING YOUR BED SHEETS REGULARLY HELPS KEEP THE MATTRESS CLEAN – Remember, there are millions of dust mites in your mattress. These mites can cause allergies that can range from coughing and itching to other significant respiratory problems. Therefore, you should not only wash the sheets but also clean the mattresses regularly.

MEMORY FOAM MATTRESSES ARE THE MOST COMFORTABLE OF ALL MATTRESSES – Memory

foam mattresses are extremely comfortable. A memory foam mattress might be useful for one individual but may not suit the other. One should look at their comfort levels before buying one.

THE MORE THE NUMBER OF COILS ON THE SPRING MATTRESS, THE BETTER IT IS – The number of coils is not the deciding factor. The quality of the materials used in the manufacturing of the spring coils is crucial. Having more loops but with a thinner gauge is not going to serve the purpose.
